Harford's Glassman Announces Staff Changes Within the Office of County Executive

BEL AIR, Md., (July 6 2020) – Harford County Executive Barry Glassman announced the following staff changes to his office today.

Current Director of Administration Billy Boniface will move within the office to serve as Glassman's chief advisor, filling a vacancy currently within the county executive's office. Boniface, who has served as the County's chief administrative officer for the past five and a half years, will be responsible for recommending, planning, directing and managing all policy initiatives of the county executive.

"As we emerge from the current COVID-19 crisis and rebuild the local economy, I am confident Mr. Boniface can help me complete the major projects I want to accomplish in my final two and a half years as county executive," Mr. Glassman said.

Current Senior Budget Analyst Ben Lloyd will be named acting director of administration and have his name forwarded to the County Council for confirmation in September. Lloyd has been with Harford County government for 13 years and holds a B.A. in political science from Towson University and a Master of Public Policy degree from the University of Maryland Baltimore County.

"Mr. Lloyd has extensive roots in Harford County along with impressive technical skills to keep our budget efficiencies updated and our financial plan strong as we continue to weather these uncertain times," County Executive Glassman said.

The staffing changes became effective Monday, July 6, 2020.
