Office of Economic Development Launches New Website

(Bel Air, MD) - - Harford County’s Office of Economic Development (OED) announces the launch of its new comprehensive website www.harfordbusiness.org. Overflowing with information geared to incoming and resident businesses alike, the newly revamped website also provides relocating BRAC families and companies a plethora of information.

Several new features include an interactive office and industrial park site map, a comprehensive BRAC section aimed at updating citizens on local employment opportunities and implementation plans, and current Harford County news articles. The new site promises to provide a multitude of quality information for everyone to utilize.

“The new and improved OED website will certainly benefit our business community and those wishing to learn more about Harford County and the opportunities our county has to offer,” stated County Executive David R. Craig.

The website is delineated into four major themes—Doing Business, BRAC APG 2012, Living Here, and In the News. Each section has been developed to offer businesses an array of valuable resources, statistics, and links to other helpful websites.

For individuals and families relocating to the community due to BRAC or for other reasons, OED’s website offers a section specifically for movers, filled with information needed to help them get settled. The BRAC APG 2012 section includes employment links, health care information, tax information, faith and worship resources, and even avenues to help discover local recreation and entertainment.
